

Artist: TWIST3D
Title: Hazel EP

Release Date: 13th May 2013
Release ID: CW069x

TWIST3D's Hazel EP and comes after the storming Nibiru EP. A strong tech house influence can be felt in these grooving TWIST3RS as well as some abstract concepts in Fingerprint and a fine uplifting riff in "Hazel". Meanwhile GROOV3 DISPENSER does exactly what it says on the tin and Shadow Maker has a tough straight down the line edge. Inspiration for these productions comes from TWIST3D spending many a long weekends partying in Belgium's infamous minimal tech-house scene but as with all TWIST3D productions you can hear his uniqueness shining through. TWIST3D has a variety of releases imminent across numerous labels including Spielstaub, Hybrid Confusion, Voodoo Records and Geysir to name a few. Furthermore, TWIST3D's latest project, his DJ concept "Crossfader", is now picking up international attention.

Hazel ▶

Spacey, gritty, rumbling tech house trance, the tasty fresh riff revolves round the stereo spectrum while the warm textured bass gives plenty of depth. This number is uplifting and airy with a true tang of beauty.

GROOV3 DISPENSER ▶

This one takes its all down a notch, directly into groove land! Meanwhile aside from the driving swing, TWIST3D's bright crisp highs certainly keep things moving upstairs too. A quality funky techno twister.

Fingerprint ▶

Splashes of intensity courageously dive across a solid tech house landscape. This is quite literally a car crash of bass rumble and off key craziness that reminds me of a war between normality and the abstract.

Shadow Maker ▶

More funky techy grooviness here, this time with a relatively straight yet tough edge. However, "relatively" is the key word as there is still plenty of TWIST3D noise and grit to be had here.
