Release ID: CW105x

Dimension Observer is a superb collection of glistening gems whose beauty and charm is bound to draw in everyone who hears them. There is no weakness in Basic Guys armour, the beats are strong and clean but also complex, the use of synth strings is nothing short of immaculate while the leads and SFX are equally excellent. Basic Guy gives credit to various sources for inspiration during the production process, namely, works by Vince Watson have played a role, as has the Sci-Fi game Home World 2. In terms of production quality, Basic Guy is thankful to German producer Reinier Zonneveld for his amazing technique improving tips. If track record is anything to go by then expect great reaction from this album, Basic Guy's recent single on City Wall, "Engineer's Dream" went out earlier this year and garnered praise from a massive cross section of respected individuals, not least, the legendary Gayle San, who assures us it is on her play list!

1. Last Call from Orion ▶

Beautiful strings, bleeps and beeps, all amidst strong beats and dramatic SFX, a fine journey piece.

2. Converter ▶

Awesome. Amazing soaring, rising feelings fitted amid large soft drums, topped off with a killer vox sample.

3. Engineer's Dream ▶

Rolling basslines and great synths create an immaculate and emotive landscape that echoes through the soul.

4. Taun TX ▶

Deep, deep vibes with trademark Basic Guy strings and quality reverbs, intense yet cooling on the brain.

5. Child of TrES 2b ▶

There's a fresh pace to TrES 2b that is both exciting and liberating, a signal that things are changing.

6. Shadows ▶

Tough kicks and bass here but still those trademark strings plus an awe inspiring set of bleeps and stabs.

7. Andromeda ▶

Four to the floor with plenty of squelch and power. Oh and those strings! One for Laurent Garnier?

8. Sun Eater ▶

This ones a real stomper! Huge kicks with a twisting, rising, yet measured synth lead. Superb.
